

I am opposed to relaxing any guidelines concerning TV content especially when the FCC should be tightening the restrictions concerning sex, profanity and violence already being allowed. It is a ridiculous argument to say this objectionable content is already being seen by minors in movies, etc... It is still objectionable to parents who are trying to raise good moral children and just because Hollywood does it in the movies does not make it good and right. I believe that relaxing the guidelines will lessen the choices available to the family.
